“Civic participation and public spaces: a key factor for sustainable tourism in historic cities”

By Martin van der Zwan
PLAN terra BV. Netherlands

Attractive public spaces are crucial for tourism. After all, most tourists that visit a city, experience it by foot and increasingly by bicycle. In this Seminar we discuss the impact of public spaces, the requirements these spaces have to meet, methods for defining and measuring the quality of public space and also for predicting the conclusion tourists may draw based on this; “will I revisit this place or not ?”
