NEW FRONTIERS IN TOURISM RESEARCH METHODS

This round table creates an engaging platform to explore the evolving landscape of research methods in tourism. Bringing together scholars working with qualitative, quantitative, and mixed approaches, the session will highlight recent developments, emerging methodologies, and key challenges shaping the field. Contributions may include innovative data collection and analysis techniques, new research tools, and interdisciplinary practices, with reflections grounded in researchers' own experiences. Designed to spark dialogue across methodological traditions, the session encourages critical exchange, reflection, and inspiration for future tourism research.
